DENVER, Jan. 27, 2015 /PRNewswire/ -- TeleTech Holdings, Inc. (NASDAQ: TTEC), a leading global provider of analytics-driven, technology-enabled customer engagement solutions, today announced that it has been ranked first on FlexJobs' annual list of the top 100 companies to watch for telecommuting and remote jobs in 2015. FlexJobs, a job service specializing in remote and flexible job opportunities, analyzed their database of over 30,000 companies' job posting history from the prior year to determine which companies would be most likely to incorporate telecommuting into their hiring practices in 2015.

"TeleTech is proud to be recognized by FlexJobs as a leader for our remote work options," said Tim Hinds, senior vice president, Human Capital at TeleTech. "Work-from-home arrangements remove geographic boundaries so we can expand our job candidate pool and hire the best fit possible. In the past, TeleTech has hired for jobs with telecommuting options such as work-from-home customer service associate, telecommunications architect and technical support representative.

"The positive impact remote work options can have on a company's bottom line and culture is increasingly being acknowledged by smart employers. Organizations such as TeleTech are among those leading the charge to show that remote work options are part of successful 21st century workplaces," said Sara Sutton Fell, founder and CEO of FlexJobs. "The Top 100 Companies to Watch for Remote jobs in 2015 is also intended to guide job-seekers in their quest to find legitimate work with trusted companies that have a successful track record recruiting and hiring telecommuters."
